The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects ruefully on Tom’s misconduct and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime and his mother tells him how terrible it will be if he is skipped school that afternoon and goes to the racetrack. Tom’s father, Ben, is still away from home, but Sam, Tom’s half-brother, has arrived and Tom is determined to make himself his own master.

Tom goes out of the house into the street. He is eager, but the streets are empty. Tom and the new arrival eat their sandwiches and Tom eventually chooses the newcomer as his guide.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirty clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Tom partly agrees, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of milestone. Tom almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his task.

Tom comes home at suppertime with a beefsteak hanging out of his mouth. He has been expelled from school for not being present. Aunt Polly is satisfied. During supper, Aunt Polly tells Tom about his adventures during the summer. She has just been skipped school that afternoon and went round to Tom's uncle Ben's and stole a box of chocolate. Aunt Polly is aware that her nephew is a troublemaker and does not love that.

Tom goes out of the house to wash the white gate. While walking down the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom meets Injun Joe, a man with a long nose and arrogant. Tom and the new arrival ends up in a fight, which results in the newcomer chasing the two all the way home.
