The novel opens with Aunt Polly scrounging the house in search of her nephew, Tom. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, "Look behind you!" and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects wistfully on Tom's mischief and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper with a whole list of false alibis about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly tells him about the free school that afternoon and her worries about Tom being skipped school that day. Tom's half-brother, Ben, has been in the woods, but Aunt Polly is satisfied, and Tom has sworn to disprove his alibi. Tom goes out of the house into a heavy snowstorm. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom notices a well-dressed and elegant man, and eventually chases him all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirty clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Tom passes by, and Tom tries to get Aunt Polly to do some of the whitewashing as a favor for a "white alley," a kind of sable. Aunt Polly agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his tasks.
