The novel opens with Aunt Polly scrounging the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sourly on Tom’s mischief and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper-time with what he tells her is a story of wild adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly questions him about his adventures, but Tom has not been at school that afternoon and swears he was not there. Aunt Polly is satisfied, and the family goes on its rounds. In the end, Aunt Polly is still angry because Tom’s collar is still very brown, but she is too tired after a day of work to be angry. Tom has sworn to Aunt Polly that he would not be caught with brown on his clothes again.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Tom passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of miffle. He almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his troubles.

Tom comes home at supper tiempo, having been skipped school that afternoon and starting a new adventure. Tom has had a lucky break as his Uncle Ben was too tired to kick him. Aunt Polly is satisfied, but Tom's half-brother, Joe, and his friends are jealous. Tom knows he must make good or be whipped. As Tom goes out of the house he sees a group of boys and is invited to help them whiten the fence. He accepts and eventually chases the nouveau all the way home.
