The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects wistfully on Tom’s mischief and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper, his clothes stained and his pockets bulging. He tells Aunt Polly the wild adventures of the day. He was not only not punished but was not even skipped school that afternoon and was even allowed to stay out till midnight. He was not even sent to bed, and Tom’s half-brother, Joe, was whipped before breakfast. Aunt Polly is satisfied.

Tom goes out of the house for a while, and Joe’s eyes follow him from the window. Tom is out for a walk through the streets of St. Petersburg. The weather is fine, and he feels very well and happy. Tom and the new arrival enjoy the view and the atmosphere of the town. Tom watches the world of adults and dreams about his own adventures. He wishes he could be as brave and adventurous as the townspeople.

Tom returns home at dark. He has not been caught by any of the adults. He hides behind the bushes, and Aunt Polly is surprised to find him.

When Tom returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whirewash the fence. Tom passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of shining. Tom almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his tasks.
