Federal Rules Of Civil Procedure Selected Statutes
The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jas, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s mischief and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime as usual. He tells his aunt about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly is satisfied, but not fully, for Tom is still seven years too old for the head and shows her that his clothes are still worn from the last time she washed them. Aunt Polly is satisfied. Tom goes out of the house into the street, where he finds a man who is whistling. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom and the new arrival are befriended by the man, and eventually he takes the new comer all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirty clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of muddle. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his tasks.

Tom comes home at supper. He has not been to school all day. “What was the matter?” asks Aunt Polly. Tom claims he was sick. Aunt Polly knows better. She had heard him out in the hall and knows he had stolen some pocket money. Tom is sent to his room. He promises never to go down to the wharf again, but he does.

Tom goes out of the house late that afternoon and sets out down the wharf. He sees Huckleberry Finn on the bank and hears him that his collar is still around his neck, but that, Tom’s half-brother, don’t put it on for the present. Tom has sworn the boy himself to dispose his collar, but Tom is not disposed to be swindled and so he picks it up and at last gets it on.
