Head and neck cancer is a group of cancers that starts in the mouth, nose, throat, larynx, sinuses, or salivary glands. Symptoms for head and neck cancer may include a lump or sore that does not heal, a sore throat that does not go away, trouble swallowing, or a change in the voice. There may also be unusual bleeding, facial swelling, or trouble breathing.

To date there is no evidence to support screening of asymptomatic patients for head and neck cancer, but, not infrequently, asymptomatic potentially premalignant lesions are found by dentists and their staff at routine oral examinations. 10% of leukoplakia (white mucosal patches) may develop into a carcinoma if left untreated.
