Masculinities In The Making From The Local To The Global
The novel opens with Aunt Polly searching the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, "Look behind you!" and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom's escapade and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime tired and hot from his day's adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly tells him that he must be punished for skipping school that afternoon and for running away after his affairs are settled. Aunt Polly is satisfied, but she is surprised to find that Tom's half-brother, Sid, is not there. Tom has arranged to disguise himself to escape his punishment.

Tom goes out of the house to wait for Sid, but he is not there. He returns home, cross and mounting. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom encounters Sid and eventually chases him all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a "white alley," a kind of marble. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his labor.

As James Messerschmidt notes in the introduction to Masculinities in the Making, this book brings together several of his previous published studies into one volume. Thus, many masculinity scholars may be familiar with both the case studies presented here, and the theoretical framing of them in terms of hegemonic masculinity (which can be defined as the form of idealised masculinity in society that reinforces the hierarchical gender relationship between men and women, and between men ...

In Masculinities in the Making, Messerschmidt intends to show the heterogeneity of masculinities by focusing on underdiscussed masculinities in the form of wimps, genderqueers, and U.S. presidents. Using structured action theory, he lucidly analyses the intersection of sex, gender, and sexuality and the duality of action and structure, in which masculinities and femininities are encapsulated.

Masculinities in the Making: From the Local to the Global

In a racial context, hegemonic masculinity among whites sustains the institutional oppression and physical terror that have framed the making of masculinities in black communities. It has been suggested that historically suppressed groups like inner city African-American males exhibit the more violent standards of hegemonic masculinity in response to their own subordination and lack of control. The primary claim of Masculinities in the Making is that HM theory can be further developed through clear steps and that structured action theory—perhaps better called a method of analysis—can help create those steps. This point is made, first, in a theory section discussing HM and structured action theories, and next, by using three empirical case studies, two social psychology oriented and one politics oriented.
