The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects warily on Tom’s escapades and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper time. These days, he still has about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly is talking for a while about how Tom has been skipping school and what a shame it is. Tom sits quietly, eating his bread and stewing that his coffee is still warm from the tea kettle. His father, Tom’s half-brother, sits there and says nothing about Tom’s escapades. Aunt Polly is satisfied. Tom has sworn the boy to silence.

Tom goes out of the house for a walk in the moonlight. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, he encounters a group of boys and joins them in a game of conundrums and eventually chases the newcomers all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Joan passes by, and Tom tries to get her to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of marble. Joan almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases her off, leaving Tom alone with his tasks.

Tom comes home at supper time. His face looks all black from the birthday cake, but Aunt Polly has a great deal of confidence about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly tells him, "I will not be skimped school that afternoon and next week will be hell and when you get home by 2 o'clock, if your coat is still warm from the heat and shows less than half your face, I shall be grieved to hear your father will be angry."

Tom and the new arrival of Joe Harper stir things up. Tom and Joe play hooky, Tom and Joe spread sheets and eventually chase the newcomes all the way home.
