Political Foundations Of Judicial Supremacy The Presidency The Supreme Court And Constitutional Leadership
The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his bands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects mathematically on Tom’s mischievousness and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper, looking bleary-eyed. He has been playing hooky, and has a story about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly asks if he has been skipping school that afternoon and what he has been doing. Tom admits that he has been playing hooky, and Aunt Polly threatens to take him back to school. Tom claims that the teacher is unfair and that he would rather be skipped school than be sent back. Aunt Polly is satisfied.

Tom goes out of the house therefore, with a purpose. He heads for a quiet place where he can work on his adventures. He finds a quiet corner and sits down to think. As he sits there, he begins to form ideas for his adventures. He imagines that he will become a famous author and eventually choose the name of the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Tim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of mantle. Tim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his thoughts.
