The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s mischief and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime. He has walked all day and is very tired. An old woman has told him about her adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly asks Tom if he can be skipped school that afternoon and goes downtown to the drug store where her husband is still working. Aunt Polly is satisfied, but Sadie, Tom’s half-sister, doesn’t understand. Tom has sworn the doctor himself to dispose his own affairs.

Tom goes out of the house into the dark and quiet street. He is breathing in the warm air of the street, whistling. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom sees a man in the distance with a white hat and a brown coat. Tom and the man arrive at the same place. Tom turns around eventually crosses the street once more the rest of the way home.

When he arrives home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirty clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. In a few hours by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing as return for a “shave alley,” a kind of obstacle. Tom almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his labor.
