The novel opens with Aunt Polly scrounging the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with mud, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, "Look behind you!" and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom's escapades and how she can't got away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime, looking as sheepish as a lamb. Aunt Polly scolds him severely for his bad behavior. Tom is sent to bed without supper and is threatened with being whipped. While visiting St. Petersburg, Tom sees the streets and envies the other boys. Aunt Polly is satisfied.

Tom goes out of the house to enjoy the fine weather and eventually chases the pigeons away. Tom and the new arrival are quite unacquainted and eventually they chase the pigeons away.

When he returns home, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirty clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Tom is bored and asks for some of the whitewashing in return for a "white alley," a kind of scuffle. Tom almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his task.
The novel opens with Aunt Polly scrounging the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, "Look behind you!" and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom's much-loved and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime, dressed in rags and torn clothes, with his pockets bulging with stolen silver. He has been skipping school that afternoon and went over to a friend's house where he drank some of his friend's beer and swore that his father was still away from home, but Fred, Tom's half-brother, and Joe, a half-caste, have convinced him to disguise himself and go looking for him.

Tom goes out of the house in search of his father, but instead meets a group of boys. They are engaged in a game of marbles, but Tom decides to play a game of catch-up with a ball that whistles. As he is wandering down the streets of St. Petersburg, he is warned by a man to stay away from the steamboat. Tom and the group of boys follow the steamboat's movement and eventually chase the newcomers all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirty clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. His father's friend, Jedediah Foster, passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a "white alley," a kind of marble. Jedediah agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and shooes him off, leaving Tom alone with his tasks.
