The novel opens with Aunt Polly scrounging the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects ruefully on Tom’s mischief and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime. He has a new look about him, and Aunt Polly asks why. He tells her he was skipped school that afternoon and went over to the river and played hooky. Aunt Polly looks hurt and shows him that his collar is still wet from the water. Tom’s half-brother, Huck, has taught him to disguise his clothes by wetting them.

Tom goes out of the house in the evening. He has a plan. He goes to the store and buys some matches and some white cloth. He then goes to the Dry Dock and starts setting off fires. He is having a good time. When he returns home, Aunt Polly is surprised. Tom tells her he has been at the yard andocht and is not to be disturbed.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirty clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whiterush the fence. Jim goes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whiterushing in return for a “wide alley,” a kind of snub. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his tasks.
