The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects melancholy on Tom’s moxie and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper time. He has been skipping school that afternoon and now reveals that his collar is still on from the last time he took it off. Aunt Polly is satisfied, but Tom’s half-brother, Sid, has convinced him to disguise his nature to get his collar back. Tom goes out of the house in front of his mother, who is whistling. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom and the new arrival, Becky Thatcher, eventually chase the artworks all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whiten his shoes. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitening in return for a “white alley,” a kind of noose. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his tasks.

Tom comes home at supper time and promises to be good. He has been skipped school that afternoon and gone elsewhere, but now he is determined to do his homework and not be skipped school that afternoon and go elsewhere again. Aunt Polly is satisfied, but Tom's half-brother, Huck, once again shuns himself to disguise his lack of work. Tom goes out of the house to order a bell to ring. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, he meets a stranger, a man who turns out to be a treasure hunter. Tom and the stranger decide to search for treasure and eventually chase the treasure at the end of the rainbow.
