The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s escapades and how the boys get away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime to find Aunt Polly dilapidated and almost in tears. He tells her about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly discovers that Tom has been skipping school that afternoon and even revisits old Tom’s barroom. He雄ic figure is still a comfort, but sad. Tom’s half-brother, Sid, tells Tom that he should take the boy to the woods and show him that he’s still a comfort.

Tom goes out of the house immediately, but Aunt Polly is satisfied. She nods her head and shows him that he’s still a comfort

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whiterush the fence. As soon as he is gone, Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing. He returns, however, and tells Tom to get off the fence for a “white alley,” a kind of noodle. Tom almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his tasks.
